

StereoVision's Majority Owned Nevada ESG Benefit Corporation Eco Allies Signs Definitive Agreement with BioChar Now to Build 120 Kiln Eco Allies Biochar Plant in Florida from the Completed Placement of Eco Allies Recently Filed $20,000,000 SEC Reg A+ Registration

6/22/2021 StereoVision, a publicly traded Nevada corporation, (OTC:SVSN) announced today that their majority-owned Nevada ESG Benefit corporation Eco Allies Inc. has signed a definitive agreement with BioChar Now LLC <http://biocharnow.com> to build a 120 kiln Eco Allies biochar plant in Florida with Eco Allies owning the majority interest.

“The Eco Allies biochar plant is the bricks and mortar in the structure of our venture” said Eco Allies’ Co-CEO Jack Honour. “BioChar Now’s biochar is the only biochar in the industry with all the government approvals it possesses. It’s on the front lines in the battle against Red Tide. Biochar Now LLC received US Patent 9,878,924 on January 30, 2018 for its Biochar Contaminant Removal System that stops the algae bloom that causes Red Tide. Red Tide kills thousands of fishes, porpoises, manatees and other aquatic life annually, and it leaves beaches inaccessible. BioChar Now biochar is the only biochar additive for livestock feed approved by the USDA. It reduces the methane cows excrete by as much as 25%. Biochar has wide a variety of potential revenue streams. These revenue streams include, mercury removal from coal fired power stacks, animal feed additives, nutrient pollution, oil & gas, lawn and landscape, waterway restoration, plastic lumber, specialty Ag (hemp, fruits, vegetables) biochar manure, and fertilizer pellets, drought relief, mine reclamation, and activated carbon replacement. BioChar Now’s proven sales pipeline for its high-quality biochar exceeds one billion dollars.

“Currently, Eco Allies’ Co-CEO Charles Guillory is building another BioChar Now biochar plant in Texas so he’s fully prepared to build, manage, and operate Eco Allies biochar plant in Florida. We feel very fortunate to be partnered with the pioneer of the biochar industry, James Gaspard, and his company BioChar Now,” Honour concluded.
